ALAN LOPEZ, 9, who has muscular dystrophy, received a poster of Richard Dean Anderson, star of 'MacGyver,' with the help of the Make-A-Wish Foundation.

WHEN YOU wish upon a star — makes no difference who you are — anything your heart desires will come to you.

So say the lyrics. And it's true. Just ask Alan Lopez of Seaside. He wanted to visit Disneyland and meet Richard Dean Anderson, star of the television show MacGyver.

Well, he visited Disneyland with his family last year, and although he didn't personally meet Anderson because he was making a movie in Canada, Alan did receive a signed poster of MacGyver and a script of his upcoming movie.

Alan had his wishes granted with the help of the Make-A-Wish Foundation, which is dedicated to the fulfillment of wishes for children under 18 who have a life-threatening illness.

Alan is 9 years old and was diagnosed three years ago with Duchennes muscular dystrophy, a disease characterized by a progressive wasting of the muscles.

Alan's brother, Jeremie, 5, also has the disease. Their little sister, Jalaine, 3, has a 50 percent chance of becoming a victim of muscular dystrophy and a 25 percent chance of being a carrier.

TAMC today gives tunnel-widening plan final review

By PAUL WOLF

WITH THE kinks worked out in the safety features of the "4U" Highway 1 widening project, the Transportation Agency for Monterey County today is prepared to analyze the project's cost-effectiveness.

And the report presented by the California Department of Transportation may be pivotal to whether TAMC next month will request state funds for 4U or the Hatton Canyon freeway, known as "1C modified."

A total of $43 million is earmarked for the freeway. Caltrans estimates 4U would cost about $33 million, while the county estimates an amount of $26 million.

The California Transportation Commission — which has directed a study of freeway alternatives — is scheduled to allocate funding to one of the projects on either Jan. 19 or Jan. 20.

Caltrans has made no secret of the fact it supports 1C modified. However, it has been charged with working alongside TAMC staff to study the safety and cost-effectiveness of 4U.

The 4U design features two tunnel underpasses, which would be located at the intersections of Carpen-

Water district eyes merging forces with other agencies

ANTICIPATING MORE state takeaways from special districts, the water board Monday evening agreed to study a new approach to saving money — consolidation of certain Monterey Peninsula Water Management District (MPWMD) services with other agencies.

The board, voting 6-0 (with Darlene Burkleo absent) agreed to study the possibility of merging certain functions with the Monterey County Water Resources Agency (MRWPCA), the Monterey Regional Water Pollution Control Agency and the Pajaro Valley Water District.

"It is my conviction as an elected official that we have to do our best to cut costs," said Sam Karas, 5th District Monterey County Supervisor and member of the seven-member water board.

Bike helmet law takes effect Jan. 1

By SCOTT BREARTON

WEARING BICYCLE helmets is not only a good idea — it's the law.

Beginning Jan. 1, a state law takes effect requiring all children under 18 to wear a helmet while riding a bicycle — whether as a rider or passenger.

The new law, however, will not pertain to off-road bicycle use, according to Kathryn Boyd, a California Highway Patrol officer.

According to Carmel Police Capt. Don Fuselier, local enforcement during the first year will consist mainly of issuing warnings and educating parents and children about the importance of wearing bicycle helmets.

"The whole purpose is to try to keep kids as safe as possible," Fuselier said. "I don't think penalizing them right off the bat is the best way to do that."

Fuselier said the goal is to facilitate voluntary compliance, so that beginning Jan. 1, 1995, police officers won't have to issue $25 citations to offenders.

Considering only 3 to 5 percent of children now wear bicycle helmets regularly, the real challenge for parents may be getting their children to don them at all.

Sheriff's department issues stalker warning to schools

By SCOTT BREARTON

IN A letter mailed out last week, the principal's office at Robert Louis Stevenson Lower and Middle School alerted parents to a possible stalker in the area.

Monterey County Sheriff's Deputy Bob Thompson told school officials a man has been observed watching young children as they get off the school bus.

According to Thompson, the man - described as 35 to 40 years old with blonde hair - was driving a tan or dirty white van at the time.

Administrators at RLS Lower and Middle School held a faculty meeting last week to address the issue and bus drivers have been asked to be aware of suspicious persons near school bus stops.

There were separate incidents of note on Dec. 15, according to Monterey County Sheriff's Department reports.

At 2:40 p.m., a Pebble Beach resident reported "a subject acting strangely around some children going home from school," near the intersection of Sunridge Road and Chamisal Way in Pebble Beach.

Then at 3:35 p.m., a 12-year-old female reported she was approached by a white male in a white van while she was walking home from Carmel Middle School, about two-tenths of a mile east of the school.

According to the sheriff's department, the man asked her if she wanted a ride home. She refused, and the driver continued eastbound on Carmel Valley Road.

Anyone who sees a person matching the suspect's description who is acting suspiciously is asked to note the vehicle license number and call the Monterey County Sheriff's Department at 647-7702.

Auto burglars target Carmel residents

By SCOTT BREARTON

SIX CARS were burglarized within the city limits last weekend - all on the same night, according to Carmel police.

Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras said all six burglaries occurred late Friday night or early Saturday morning in the area of Torres and Ninth. Stereos from both locked and unlocked vehicles were targeted, according to Poitras.

"In some cases, windows were smashed to gain entry," Poitras said. "It appeared as if they were targeting high-quality car stereos. That seemed to be the primary motivation for the thieves."

Police haven't ruled out the possibility burglars used small pieces of porcelain from spark plugs (called "shatter rocks" or "ninja rocks") to shatter windows without making a loud sound. The devices are now widely recognized as burglars' tools, according to Poitras.

Poitras said auto burglaries seem to be increasing throughout the peninsula, and offered some advice to owners of expensive car stereos:

"If you have a face plate removal system, remove your face plate," Poitras

Use your head – new bicycle helmet law takes effect Jan. 1

Bicycle helmets can save lives, but only if they are worn. According to the California State Automobile Association (CSAA), more than 1,000 people are killed in bike accidents every year in North America, and as many as half of those deaths could have been prevented if those bike riders had worn helmets.

According to a study in Consumer Reports magazine, wearing a bicycle helmet can reduce the risk of head injury by as much as 85 percent. Bike helmets absorb shock and cushion the head in the event of an accident.

Bike helmets today are lightweight, comfortable and available in a wide variety of colors and styles to please the most discriminating youngster. Experts say allowing a child to select their own helmet will increase the likelihood it will be worn.

The majority of serious bicycle accidents involving children occur close to home on quiet neighborhood streets, proving accidents can happen to anyone, anywhere, regardless of their cycling skills.

Proper fit imperative

And there are other good reasons for bringing your child along when shopping for a bicycle helmet. A helmet that doesn't fit defeats its purpose.

A helmet should fit comfortably without shifting or falling off. The helmet should sit level and not rock back and forth or from side to side. Also, the straps should be adjustable for a level and snug fit.

The CSAA recommends purchasing a helmet which has either a SNELL or ANSI sticker on its interior, which the law mandates. The stickers indicate the helmet has passed testing standards of either the Snell Memorial Foundation or the American National Standards Institute.

SNELL and ANSI-approved helmets from Trek, Specialized and Bell range in price from $30 to $120, according to a local bike shop employee.

The Carmel Police Department's bicycle patrol may eventually play a role in enforcing the new law.

While Fuselier noted the city's bicycle unit is temporarily "on the back burner," he said the intent is to

'We're going to enforce it just like the law says. Through 1994, it's primarily an educational program. Commencing Jan. 1, 1995, we will be issuing citations for it.'

— Ed Harriger,
Pacific Grove Police Lieutenant

resume the patrol when the budget situation improves. Currently, only Officer Theresa Rabaut and Reserve Officer Tim Meroney periodically use the police bike, Fuselier said.

Positive influence

Rabaut said the bicycle patrol may have a positive influence on young people: "When kids see police officers wearing helmets, they respect that."

Also, educational efforts are underway at Junipero Serra School, where Steve Rana – a senior police officer – teaches the Drug Awareness Resistance Education (D.A.R.E.) program and talks to children about safety issues, including bicycle safety, according to Fuselier.

Then there's the annual "Bicycle Rodeo," sponsored by the Carmel Police and Recreation departments. Focusing on bicycle safety, the event includes professionals who thoroughly check youngsters' bicycles for loose nuts and bolts, and includes a proficiency course where kids make their way through an obstacle course designed to help them learn the parameters of their riding skills.

Fuselier noted that children are required to wear a helmet in order to participate in the rodeo.

Helmet giveaway

At this year's rodeo, held in late October, Rabaut said about 16 new bicycle helmets were given away to children who didn't have their own.

"We were lucky to be able to give helmets to all the kids who did not have helmets," Rabaut said. "We didn't have that big of a turnout."

Pacific Grove Police Lieutenant Ed Harriger said efforts to enforce the law on the recreational trail between the Monterey Bay Aquarium and Lovers Point will be similar to those in Carmel – education the first year, then citations.

Currently there are four bicycle patrolman in Pacific Grove who ride along the rec trail during busy summer months and in the downtown area.

"We're going to enforce it just like the law says," Harriger said. "Through 1994, it's primarily an educational program. Commencing Jan. 1, 1995, we will be issuing citations for it."

"I think even then we'll probably give a lot of warnings on it," Harriger added. "Our officers are out there to educate the public."

Harriger said because children under 18 aren't of "licensable age," officers can't really issue them a traffic citation. So, again, police are hoping parents and children will voluntarily comply with the law.

Carmel Valley parent cites importance of bicycle helmets... one may have saved her son

By SCOTT BREARTON

THERE IS a good reason for making sure your child wears a helmet while bicycle riding.

Perhaps this is best personified in nine-year-old David Steinberg, who may not be alive today had he not been wearing a helmet the day he fell off his bike and hit his head on the pavement.

NINE-YEAR-old David Steinberg has made wearing a helmet an integral part of riding his bicycle.

According to his mother, Christine, a Carmel Valley resident, she was dropping her younger son off at Tularcitos Elementary School one morning in October when another parent told her that David had been in an accident on his bicycle.

"David was going over a small bump," Christine recalled. "He slid on some gravel and fell off his bike. He landed on his head."

Fortunately, the accident occurred right in front of the Carmel Valley Volunteer Fire Department. Upon witnessing the fall, Christine said several firemen "rushed over, checked him out and decided he should go to the hospital."

"I might have been knocked out for about 10 seconds," David said. "When I looked up, all the firemen were around me."

David was transported to Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula, where he was treated for a mild concussion.

Christine said David Huntley, a pediatric neurologist, examined her son and determined that "if David hadn't been wearing a helmet, he would have had major head injuries."

"The implication was that he might not have survived," Christine added. "The injuries would have been that bad."

Christine said she and her son had argued about helmets for a long time, and it took "getting a pure black helmet that looked good" before he would consider wearing one.

"I think it helped me a lot," David concluded. "The paramedic told me that if I didn't have my helmet on, my head would've cracked open."

"A lot of kids are already wearing helmets," Harriger noted.

Frank Knight, owner of Adventures by the Sea, a Monterey-based sports equipment rental facility, said he made wearing bicycle helmets mandatory this year.

"Mainly because we're a rental facility, we made it a shop law as of 1993," Knight said. "We said, 'you know what, it's just not worth it. Let's make all people under 18 wear helmets.'"

The Pebble Beach Co. is getting into the act as well. According to Robert Hedburg, who works in the safety division of the personnel department, discount coupons for bicycle helmets were handed out at an employee Christmas party Dec. 12.

Hedburg said Tony Bushlow, who owns Aquarian Bicycles in Monterey and W M&M Cyclery in Pacific Grove, offered a 30 percent discount to Pebble Beach employees.

"I heard about this new law kicking in January 1, called Tony and asked if we could work out some kind of a deal," Hedburg said.

"We just wanted to help make parents, our employees, aware of this new law and give them an opportunity to get their kids into helmets by the first of the year."

Hedburg noted that more than 100 families took advantage of the coupons:

"I think we reached out to quite a few families," he said.

When contacted at Aquarian Bicycles, Bushlow said while he hasn't seen a real upswing in helmet sales yet, his employees regularly promote their use.

New 1994 laws target young drinkers, pickup owners, boaters

IN ADDITION to the new bicycle helmet law affecting children under 18, more than 1,300 other additions have been made to the California Vehicle Code that will take effect Jan. 1.

Among them are:

- A rule that prohibits any person from riding in the open bed of a pickup truck without a seat belt. The new law does not apply to pickups with camper shells.

According to supporters of the new law, 86 people have died and more than 3,000 have been injured after falling out or being thrown from the open beds of pickup trucks during the past two years.

Under current law, only children under 12 are required to wear restraints in such vehicles.

- A law that makes it illegal for anyone under 21 to drive a vehicle if their blood-alcohol level is .01 percent or higher. The legal limit for drivers over 21 is .08 percent.

Authored by Sen. Quentin Kopp, I-San Francisco, the intent was to curb the number of alcohol-related accidents involving teen-age drivers. Currently, there is no penalty for drivers between 18 and 20 caught driving with a blood-alcohol level below .08 percent, or for drivers between 16 and 18 with a blood-alcohol level of less than .05 percent.

According to Janice Marschner, Kopp's administrative assistant in Sacramento, the purpose of the bill was "to close the loophole in the present law."

- A new boating safety law that is expected to affect thousands of Californians. Though not a Vehicle Code addition, the law requires any child under the age of 6 to wear a Coast Guard-approved life preserver when riding in a boat 26 feet in length or smaller.

The law will be enforced by California State Parks and the Department of Fish and Game.

California State Park Ranger Mark Langner said he doubted the law would be heavily enforced by State Parks, because of the relatively small number of contacts they make with area boaters.

"It's not something we routinely do," Langner said, noting rangers would only be involved in cases of negligence.

Last chance for '4U' scheme before CTC makes the call

ter Street and Ocean Avenue, and widening a portion of Highway 1 to four lanes. There have been concerns, especially on Caltrans' part, about the sharp left-hand turn into and through the tunnel that begins at and departs Ocean, but those concerns appear to be cleared up.

"I think we have achieved consensus on the technical aspects of 4U," said Monterey County Public Works Director Gerald Gromko. "It is designed in accordance with Caltrans' standards, and it is safe."

Gromko said the county will present a report today indicating the project is cost-effective, but Caltrans, he says, uses different methods to determine cost-effectiveness.

"Caltrans has come around on the issue of safety, and that is a big step forward," said 5th District Monterey County Supervisor Sam Karas, who opposes the freeway and supports 4U.

'An optimist'

"The issue is cost-effectiveness, and I am an optimist," said Gregg Albright, Caltrans project engineer, agreeing his agency's report today could be decisive.

"Yes, our findings may make or break 4U on the question of whether it is a viable alternative," said Albright. "I am confident 1C modified is the most cost-effective project; the question is whether 4U can offer enough benefit. We have to figure that out."

In a two-and-a-half hour meeting at the Caltrans district headquarters in San Luis Obispo last Thursday, TAMC and Caltrans engineers agreed on ways to make the Ocean Avenue tunnel safer.

They recommended widening the tunnel to improve safety for vehicles that are likely exceed the designated 25 mph speed limit, according to sources. The question of cost-effectiveness, however, was not resolved.

Fruitful meeting

"It was a good meeting, and I felt Caltrans was extremely open-minded," said Monterey Councilman Dave Potter, who serves on TAMC and sat in on the meeting. "This was the most creative I have seen them."

Potter, who opposes the freeway, has not missed one of the several technical workshops that have been carried out between TAMC and Caltrans, on both 4U and its predecessor, "4/6."

Other frequent observers have been Karas and Carmel Councilwoman Barbara Brooks, both of whom serve on the 17-member TAMC and oppose the freeway.

Because Caltrans has been so staunch an advocate of 1C modified, these local officials have been concerned about Caltrans' ability to provide neutral technical information and not let their partisanship influence their research.

Potter said Thursday he is convinced Caltrans "was working extremely hard" and in good faith to improve the quality of the 4U project.

If Caltrans and TAMC staff affirm the cost-effectiveness of 4U, the panel is expected to send a delegation to Sacramento to ask for funding for 4U.

Other considerations

On the other hand, if there is no agreement on the cost-effectiveness of the widening project, TAMC will have to decide whether to approach the CTC and ask for money on a project for which Caltrans does not give its blessing.

If Caltrans is unsold on 4U's cost-effectiveness, TAMC may return to its fallback — the freeway.

Today's meeting is scheduled for 9:30 a.m. at the Salinas Community Room, 940 North Main St.

Unanimous approval follows 3 hours of testimony

Cañada Woods gets OK amid protest from residents

By SUSAN BECK

THE MONTEREY COUNTY Subdivision Committee approved the proposed Cañada Woods development project despite an avalanche of complaints from Carmel Valley residents.

After three hours of testimony, either for or against various aspects of the project, the committee unanimously agreed Thursday, Dec. 16 that Cañada Woods met all the technical requirements set by the county.

The committee's decision to recommend the subdivision to the Monterey County Planning Commission did not set well with about 40 residents who chartered a bus from Carmel Valley to voice their disapproval to the committee about the planned commercial use of the proposed project.

The group included representatives from five homeowners associations and members of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association (CVPOA).

Lawrence Lombard, president of the Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club Homeowners Association, presented the seven-member subdivision committee with a petition against the project.

"In two days, 303 signatures had been collected," Lombard explained to the committee. "We aren't even organized. We believe we could get another 500 signatures with little effort."

He said the homeowners in the general area of the Cañada Woods project have no objection to the 44 home sites on the north side of Carmel Valley Road. But, he added, "We are concerned about the commercial plan."

The commercial development would include a convenience store, service center, offices, sewage treatment plant to serve the entire project and recreational vehicle storage in the basement of the facility.

The commercial plan would utilize 8.8 acres of the 50-acre property on the south side of Carmel Valley Road adjacent to Valley Hills Shopping Center. The remaining 40 acres would continue to be used for farming as it has been for the past century.

Lombard noted the resident's main concerns are the lack of a need for a commercial center and traffic.

The shopping center at Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Road, the Mid Valley Shopping Center, which is two miles east of the proposed new commercial center, and Carmel Village, Lombard pointed out, "serve the needs of valley homeowners more than adequately."

He also said adding more traffic to the area, especially commercial vehicles, would exacerbate the existing traffic problems.

"Let's solve the traffic problem at Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Road first," Lombard said. "The residential plan can stand on its own two feet. But, if the commercial plan passes, it will destroy this beautiful section of Carmel Valley. Please listen to the people in this community."

Few changes

Ileene Crane Franks represented CVPOA with a statement citing the Cañada Woods project, as proposed, did not comply with the Carmel Valley Master Plan, but could be corrected with a few changes.

One of the conditions set by CVPOA for the property — which is owned by Clint Eastwood, his former wife, Maggie, and the Leonard and Emily Williams Family Trust — would be to change the proposed 8.8 acres for commercial use to one 3.1-acre lot.

"We believe Cañada Woods can comply with the valley's master plan," Franks said. "The project can serve as an example for future Carmel Valley developers to follow."

Anthony Lombardo, attorney for the project, told committee members he was not surprised about the objections concerning a commercial center. But, he added, "I'm disturbed that CVPOA doesn't understand the valley's master

Proposed consolidation has merit, water directors say

It was Karas who raised the issue of consolidation, and his water board colleagues agree the idea has merit. In fact, Lou Haddad, in his first meeting as a new director, said he would like to explore the pros and cons of consolidating two of the entities themselves — the MPWMD and the MRWPCA.

Haddad's idea of full consolidation is not widely viewed as feasible. Many water directors, along with MPWMD General Manager Jim Cofer, note that the MPWMD and MRWPCA are structured so differently they could not easily be merged.

While the former is governed by five elected representatives and two ex-officio directors, the latter is a joint-powers agency run by appointed officials.

"Consolidating only services would be a good middle ground," asserted Director David Pendergrass.

Moreover, the two agencies share only a portion of their respective geographical areas.

Shared services, however, may be possible in the area of computers, engineering and financial services, according to Karas. Moreover, Karas believes there may be a possibility for equipment-sharing arrangements between some of the agencies.

Over the past two years, the cash-strapped state has increased its claim on property tax revenues, affecting municipal, county and special-district coffers.

"The state is going to do more of this, and we have to be prepared," said Karas, who does not want to be in the position of authorizing more hikes to maintain existing service levels.

The board's action requests the help of the Local Agency Formation Commission for Monterey County (LAFCO) in determining a proposal for where the streamlining can take place.

New leadership

In other developments, the water board voted 6-0 to install director Jim Hughes as its new chairman, replacing Kenneth Long, who served at his last meeting in November.

Director Fran Farina was designated vice chair, and she will automatically become chairwoman after 12 months should the board approve a new rotating procedure at its January meeting.

The board hopes to move to an annual rotating system similar to that used by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors. Directors said the need to elect a chair has resulted in disruptive political fighting.

Karas seeks representative for Public Safety Committee

By PAUL WOLF

FIFTH DISTRICT Supervisor Sam Karas is seeking nominations for a representative to serve on the newly formed Monterey County Public Safety Committee.

The committee, which has 11 of its 16 members already in place, will be charged with figuring out how to divide roughly $1.4 million a year. These funds, originating from November's successful Proposition 172, must be used for public safety and law-enforcement programs.

"These nominations can actually be anyone within the district," said Felipe Velazquez, the county's principal administrative analyst, noting that proposed representatives at large do not have to have a public safety background.

Those interested in applying are encouraged to send a letter characterizing their desire to serve, along with their home address and daytime telephone number. According to Jody Parsons, an aide to Karas, the applications should be sent in as soon as possible, but certainly no later than the third week in January.

(They can be mailed to Sam Karas, 1200 Aguajito Rd. Suite 001, Monterey 93940.)

In general, counties have benefited more than cities from the boon of Prop. 172. For example, the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea seeks to gain only $5,100 a year, while the county anticipates nearly $14 million.

Earlier this month, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors agreed on a formula for allocating that $14 million. For starters, the funds will be enough to restore 17 public safety jobs and develop a few new programs.

Seeking benefit

Because cities within the county have felt left out of the loop, the county agreed to retain a mechanism by which 10 percent of Prop. 172 windfall would remain discretionary.

Enter the Public Safety Committee. Cities, along with agencies in the unincorporated areas, could submit funding requests for certain programs and projects. The committee would submit its recommendations to the board of supervisors, which will have the final say.

Five of the committee members will be representatives at large, each representing one of the five supervisorial districts. The other 11 committee members include a representation from various county and city offices and departments.

Immediately after the board of supervisors approved the formation and composition of the public safety committee, many city officials, including those in Carmel, complained that cities stood to gain from the committee.

However, the makeup of the committee appears auspicious for incorporated areas and their requests.

There also was concern about whether small cities would see any of the $1.4 million. City and county officials alike have explained, however, that criminal behavior "does not observe county lines," as Carmel Police Capt. Don Fuselier put it.

Catching a criminal in Salinas today may mean he or she will not commit a crime in Carmel tomorrow, he said.

According to Velazquez, the 10-percent allocation figure is not set in stone.

Volunteers guide effort to enlarge Sunset Center offices

THE FRIENDS of Sunset Center Foundation and Carmel Heritage are spearheading a community volunteer effort to improve and enlarge the ticket sales and administrative offices at Sunset Community and Cultural Center.

"The City of Carmel is getting a free renovation project at no cost," said Mayor Ken White. "We're just delighted. It will be a much more efficient use of space."

The offices, entered on San Carlos near Ninth, are well known to Carmelites who attended the "new" Sunset School, which opened in 1926. According to Howard Skidmore, a foundation board member, they were formerly the offices of the school's principal.

"Currently, persons seeking tickets for stage and film performances at Sunset Theater know the area as the cramped, poorly-lighted space in which they make their purchases," Skidmore said.

When the remodeling is complete, the ticket sales and administrative offices will be nearly double their current size, according to Skidmore.

Contributing $10,000

The foundation is contributing $10,000 toward the remodeling effort, according to its president Judy Thodos, who noted the money was raised through concession sales by volunteers at Sunset Center cultural events.

According to Kay Prine, Carmel Heritage president, all other project requirements will be met by community donations of materials, labor and additional funds.

Skidmore said Robert Paravacini, an architect and vice president of Friends of Sunset Center Foundation, has contributed to the project's design. Jim Gregg, a contractor and vice president of Carmel Heritage, is the volunteer project manager.

Paravacini and Gregg are contacting sources for construction labor and supplies, and also are asking for assistance in this community effort.

According to Skidmore, there is no connection between this project and the $11 million Sunset Theater renovation. However, he said improved offices should enable staff to carry out the planned theater enhancement more effectively.

Long history in Carmel

Dedicated in January, 1926, Carmel's grammar school was a U-shaped building containing five large classrooms and the principal's office surrounding a center courtyard. Today, it comprises the northern portion of Sunset Center.

Skidmore said the main entrance to the school was accessible through the center courtyard. Though another entrance was located on the San Carlos Street side, he said "students preferred the courtyard entrance to going by the principal's office."

In 1931, Skidmore said an auditorium and two more classrooms were needed. Although the Great Depression was in full swing, he said, the project was seen as a way of creating local jobs.

"A bond issue was approved by a vote of 412 to 123, a record turnout for the small community," said Skidmore, who noted today's theater, adjacent Babcock Room and Room 7 (a Monterey County Symphony office) were built as a result of the tax.

Mayor's Report

By KEN WHITE

Counting our blessings

AS 1993 DRAWS to a close and we prepare to enjoy holidays with friends and families, it seems an appropriate time for us to reflect on this year and share some thoughts with you.

Carmel-by-the-Sea was not spared the economic hardships that afflicted so many towns and cities

Letter to the Editor

Disturbed by last 'Mayor's Report'

Dear Editor:

I was disturbed at The Mayor's Report (Carmel Pine Cone, Dec. 16). It was irresponsible use of this designated space. The column was in no way a report concerning city business.

It was, however, an invitation by the mayor to come and donate to a specific cause. I wonder if it is proper for the mayor to endorse any charity over another? If it was his intent to solicit us, maybe he should have taken out an ad. (Mayor White's volunteerism is well known. Few volunteers can approach his years of time and commitment to community groups.)

Wasn't it really more of a way for the mayor to promote his political future? Is this irresponsible and biased coverage on the part of The Pine Cone, a newspaper many Carmel-by-the-Sea citizens consider to be a responsible and unbiased newspaper? Did the Pine Cone give political endorsement to the mayor?

Barbara Smoak
Carmel

(In his submission, Mayor White wrote in part, "Let's work together again — for no personal interest to any of us other than the joy of sharing what we can..." It was in that spirit that the column was written. In fairness to Mayor White, he did not submit his piece as a designated "Mayor's Report." That was my decision. Perhaps the piece instead should have been published as a letter to the editor. — Ed.)

across the country. The pain of budget cuts is very real to all concerned, and adjusting to the accompanying reduction in some services has not been easy.

We are especially appreciative of our fine city staff which, despite downsizing, continues its first-rate performance. It is gratifying to all of us on the city council to receive so many complimentary remarks and letters from the citizens in praise of this group of professionals.

We look to 1994 with great hope and happy hearts, thankful for all of our many blessings. We still live in paradise, my friends, and our community and its people remain special.

We are grateful for the new spirit of cooperation that has developed in the community. Communication is the key to harmony in so many relationships — and the council's relationship with the community will only grow stronger and better the more we continue to truly communicate.

On behalf of all of the members of the Carmel-by-the-Sea City Council, I wish you and yours the happiest of holidays. We thank you for your support and look forward to working together throughout a happy and prosperous New Year.

Doris Day's Best Friends

By DORIS DAY

Clip those claws

WHETHER YOU feel declawing is needless mutilation or a saving grace, I think we all agree that this issue always invokes very strong opinions on both sides.

Although I've often stated that I'm basically against the idea, I know of many cats who would have been euthanized because of this destructive behavior if it hadn't been for declawing.

Many people don't know that claw clipping is also an option. It's a safe, simple way to protect carpeting and furniture and it also benefits your kitty-cat by removing old, brittle layers of claw that could snag and cause painful tearing.

Claw clipping is easy to do and can be accomplished so quickly your feline friend will hardly know what's happened. Initially you may want to ask your veterinarian to show you how to gently push on the paw pad to expose the claws, then use a nail clipper to pinch off the sharp tips.

If your cat's front claws have already been removed, don't forget the back ones. Ingrown or overgrown claws can be very painful!

Cat Sack

Now that you know almost all there is to know about claw clipping, here's a new product you may find useful:

The Cat Sack is a completely washable, nylon zip-up bag that restrains your cat so you can clip its nails with a minimum of stress and strain.

It has a two-way zipper along the animal's back, a Velcro collar, individual zippers for front paws, and an underside zipper for access to hindquarters and rear paws.

Although I haven't tried this myself, I think the Cat Sack might also be useful when you have to give pills or oral medication, or when medicating eye or ear problems.

The Cat Sack costs $39.95 plus shipping and comes in four sizes. For more information, call the Pet Post at (415) 566-9593.

S.O.S.

Just before we went to press I received an urgent call to help four horses in desperate need. They, along with six other horses, were rescued from a slaughterhouse earlier this year. Six have been placed in excellent homes and just four are left. Their rescuer has lost her job and fallen behind on boarding costs. She owes $2,200 and has until the end of this month to come up with the money or her beloved horses will again be headed for the slaughterhouse.

We have a place for the horses but we need help to bail them out of this situation. Any donation will be greatly appreciated! Please send your gift to the Doris Day Pet Foundation, P.O. Box 8166, Universal City, CA 91608, and designate HORSES. I'll keep you posted and thanks for caring.

Seasons Greetings

'Tis the second night before Christmas and I wish you all a safe, happy and peaceful holiday. See you next week!

From your friends at Sweet Shot Golf & Tennis

A. MATCH PLAY

On any day of a match play competition, a player may practice on the competition course before a round.

B. STROKE PLAY

On any day of a stroke competition or play-off, a competitor shall not practice on the competition course or test the surface of any putting green on the course before a round or play-off. When two or more rounds of a stroke competition are to be played over consecutive days, practice between those rounds on any competition course remaining to be played is prohibited.

Exception: Practice putting or chipping on or near the first teeing ground before starting a round or play-off is permitted.

PENALTY FOR BREACH OF RULE 7-1b: Disqualification

Note: The Committee may in the conditions of a competition (Rule 33-1) prohibit practice on the competition course on any day of a match play competition or permit practice on the competition course or part of the course (Rule 33-2c) on any day of or between rounds of a stroke competition.

A player shall not play a practice stroke either during the play of a hole or between the play of two holes except that, between the play of two holes, the player may practice putting or chipping on or near the putting green of the hole last played, any practice putting green or the teeing ground of the next hole to be played in the round, provided such practice stroke is not played from a hazard and does not unduly delay play (Rule 6-7).

Exception: When play has been suspended by the Committee, a player may, prior to resumption of play, practice (a) as provided in the Rule, (b) anywhere other than on the competition course and (c) as otherwise permitted by the Committee.

PENALTY FOR BREACH OF RULE 7-2:

Match Play - Loss of hole; Stroke Play - Two strokes.

In the event of a breach between the play of two holes, the penalty applies to the next hole.

Note 1: A practice swing is not a practice stroke and may be taken at any place, provided the player does not breach the Rules.

Note 2: The Committee may prohibit practice on or near the putting green of the hole last played.

Miracle on Ocean Avenue — will he find the 'Perfect Gift'?

By BEVERLY BORGMAN
Special to The Carmel Pine Cone

THAT SAD-EYED man you've seen on the streets of Carmel belongs to me. He's the one with a hand-written shopping list clutched in one hand, The Carmel Pine Cone in the other, and he keeps patting his back pocket to see if his wallet is still there.

I've tried to explain to him that I really don't need anything special this year, that I'd be content with a few new plants, a fruitcake and maybe a warm scarf, but he's convinced that Christmas means sacrifice. His sacrifice.

If ever there was a knight sent in search of the Holy Grail, it is my Significant Other. He wears his wind-breaker like a suit of armor as he leans into the chill wind on Ocean Avenue, checking each store to see if by some miracle he will find the Perfect Gift.

It's then that I realize that the difference between the sexes is most marked when it comes to Christmas shopping. Woman has a sort of Super Antenna, and every time the man in her life makes a casual remark morning and asks, "So, what do you want for Christmas this year?"

Never mind that the Little Woman has dragged him through Macy's, Victoria's Secret and every little boutique or gallery that Carmel has to offer, remarking pointedly, "Ummmm, look at that nightgown. Isn't that pretty?" or "Wouldn't that painting look absolutely gorgeous over the fireplace?" or "Did you know that my ring size is 5-1/2?" He still hasn't a clue.

Consequently, at my house it goes like this: On or about Dec. 7th he asks me to make a list of things I want, and while I'm really not the acquisitive type, I manage to get rolling after a day or so. The list ranges from stationery to candy to pajamas to perfume, and even though I carefully explain that these are only "suggestions," a starting point from which he may get inspiration, he goes out and shops as if he were at Lucky — a condemned man buying his last meal. He hauls home every single thing I've named.

The last part of his ordeal is the wrapping, and I can hear him swearing and groaning behind a closed door, only appearing now and then to ask if we have more Scotch tape or if I can hold down the ribbon so he can tie a bow.

And then it's Christmas Eve and we take turns opening our gifts until it's obvious that I have many more packages than he does. "Oh, you shouldn't have!" I squeal.

He leans back and smiles like the cat who caught the canary, and I have to ask myself, "Would I want it any other way?"

'Then, when December comes around and he realizes it's nearly put-up-or-shut-up time, he lays down the sports section one morning and asks, "So, what do you want for Christmas this year?"' about something he could use or might like, she makes a mental note for future reference. That explains why the S.O. found a nifty little wheelbarrow under his tree last year.

Man, on the other hand, is so used to hearing woman talk that he automatically nods and agrees to anything when actually he is straining to hear if the 49ers did indeed make a first down. Then, when December comes around and he realizes it's nearly put-up-or-shut-up time, he lays down the sports section one plan."

Cañada Woods project 'superb,' according to developer Williams

He explained the master plan allows for 8 acres of commercial use on the property. "The county has only zoned 5 acres," he said. "What we are doing is updating the master plan by adding the allotted 3 acres."

It's not a matter of changing the pristine beauty of the area, he said. The Williams family, who owns the 50 acres designated for commercial use, "could have developed the property even more. They are entitled to develop."

Alan Williams, project developer, expressed his frustration with the resident's comments, which he felt were based on misinformation.

"We have dotted every i and crossed every t so we have a development project that is superb," he said.

Another major issue regarding the proposed Cañada Woods development is the matter of creating a trail for public use over the northern portion of the project.

Gary Tate, district manager for the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District, said the district supports a public trail easement along the road shoulder of the Cañada de la Segunda Road beginning at Carmel Valley Road and ending at the Monterra subdivision trail easements, which are adjacent to Cañada Woods.

Tate said policies in the Carmel Valley Master Plan would support a trail on the Cañada Woods property. "Those policies have legal standing for requiring a trail," he added.

Lombardo said the owners of Cañada Woods "most vehemently oppose" the trail condition.

A requirement for a trail is not shown on any area plan, Lombardo said. "It is not appropriate to impose this condition on the applicant. It is inconsistent with the general plan, which is the controlling document."

The Cañada Woods project does include a bike path in front of the property, which was not required by anyone, Lombardo added. "We did that to make sure kids can get through the area safely."

Dale Ellis, zoning administrator for the committee, said, "I've never seen a staff report go into a level of detail on certain conditions, especially with regard to the Carmel Valley Master Plan."

Carmel police recover stolen San Jose auto

BURGLARIES from page 2 said. "If you have a pull-out car stereo, pull it out yourself, don't let the burglar do it."

There are no suspects in these cases, according to Poitras.

In an unrelated matter, Poitras said a stolen car from San Jose was recovered at Scenic and Ocean shortly after midnight on Monday.

Poitras said Carmel Police Officer Phil Lunsford ran a routine vehicle check and determined it was stolen.

According to Poitras, a 15-year-old juvenile from the San Jose area was arrested for possession of a stolen vehicle. Eight other juveniles were taken into custody, though all but the driver were released, Poitras said.

The suspect was transported to Monterey County Juvenile Hall in Salinas.

For whom the bells toll

TINNITUS ROARED through my head after I staggered from the bucket on Ocean Avenue. I had rung a bell for The Salvation Army for two hours and the incessant ding-a-ling-a-ling left me feeling a little dingy afterwards, but satisfied.

If you've never done a spell on the bells you should try it next year. Not only do you have the privilege of raising money for people who need food, clothing and shelter, but you get to interface with old friends. People say the Christmas spirit hits them as soon as they ring the bells.

My first stint was at Macy's several years ago. I, like others, had thought until then that only corps members served time on the bells. But my friend Chuck Magnuson, coordinator of the Salinas program, told me otherwise. And before I knew it I'd committed myself.

I figured the more attention I got, the more money people would drop in the red bucket, so I wore a hot pink leisure suit. At first, I felt like a fool. Should I grin the whole time? Even at people who didn't empty their change purses when they passed by? What if someone I knew saw me? Would they think I had become born again? Joined a cult?

My fears were allayed as strangers smiled at me and dropped coins and dollars into the bucket and said, "Gee, The Salvation Army has class."

Friends I hadn't seen for years stopped, chatted and peeled off some greenbacks for the can. Little kids harassed their parents until they made contributions. And the most gratifying people were the Scrooges. I'd see them out of the corner of my eye, shuffling around, wincing with guilt, scorning anything with Christmas overtones. I'd stare right into their eyes and say, "Me-e-r-r-y Christmas!" And let them know it was fine if they didn't put any money in. Of course, this reverse psychology had them snared and soon they'd make a contribution. And I'd hear over their shoulders, as they groused out of sight, "Merry Christmas to all..." You know the rest.

Believe it or not, my most lucrative haul was in front of Sprouse Reitz in Pacific Grove. The store had a fantastic sale going on and I positioned myself right in front of the door.

This brings me to the present and the experience I had at Carmel Plaza.

When I arrived, a young woman seemed relieved to hand me the bell. Her English was a bit shakey, and since I had failed Spanish in high school we communicated largely by sign language. The upshot was: the bell had a wire inside, but no metal clanker. She had been tinkling the wire, and wondering why people hadn't been more generous.

Well, I'm co-dependent, so I immediately went looking for a bell. My first stop was Raffles and the kind owner loaned me a tiny bell attached to a long piece of felt.

I attached the entire thing to the wire and clanked away, adjusting the unit each time it broke.

It was a lovely day. The maples and liquid ambers were flames against a blue sky; police people cordoned off Ocean Ave. preparing for the tree lighting ceremony; and workers strung lights in the tall redwood across from Devendorf Park.

The beagle man came by. You know, the one who has half a dozen of them all leashed together. Such cute little exclamation marks trotting down the street.

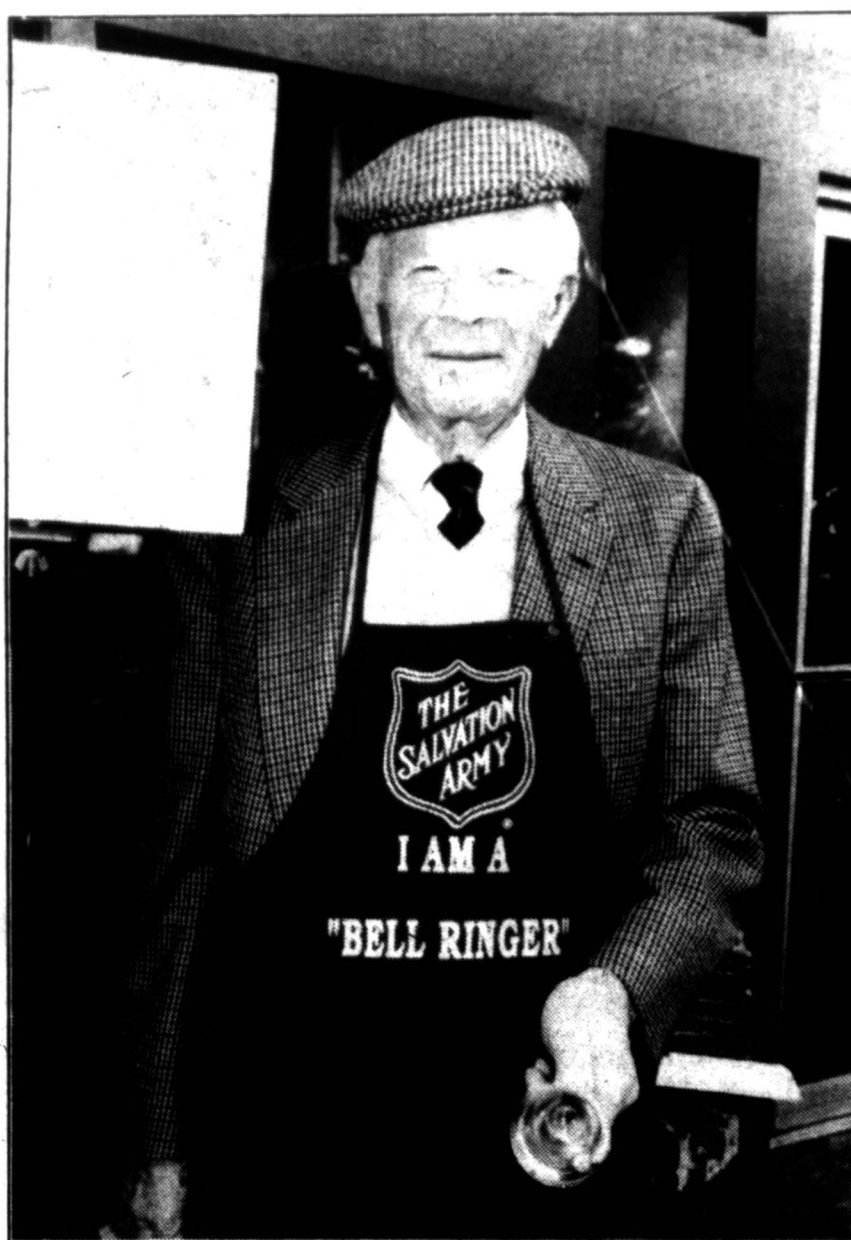

Then there were the tourists. Some looked at me as if I were a little ruffian begging on the streets of Italy. Others averted their eyes as I rang my wrists into carpool tunnel syndrome.

Then a couple friends came by, made donations, and brought me a diet cola.

I stared at the headlines in the newspaper machines: Polly Klaas hadn't yet been found. My heart was filled with angst and love and sadness about the world...

Then a miracle came walking down the street. She was a lovely 30-something woman, hobbling along with a splint on her ankle and crutches. While her husband shopped she sat on a flower bed and we talked.

She was from Texas. A year ago she slammed on her FAITHFUL BELL ringer for The Salvation Army, Col. Ken Dyer, stands at his command post in front of Carmel Post Office.

CHOIR BOYS looked in wonder at the royal boar's head, replete with apple in mouth, being paraded around The Inn at Spanish Bay.

THE SALVATION Army Divisional Commander, Lt. Col. Bruce Harvey and his wife, Lt. Col. Dorothy Harvey, were glad guests at the Christmas Feast.

LITTLE PAGEBOYS at An Old English Christmas Feast and Revels, charmed the Dickens out of guests.

IT WAS a joy to see Morley Brown on the social circuit again. She is at the helm of most Salvation Army soirees and the Feast was no exception. She poses here with Monterey Bay Magazine event sponsors: Sharon Bates, associate publisher, and Marla Young, editor.

brakes to avoid hitting a drunk who staggered across her path. It almost cost her her foot. But now, several operations later and several more to go, she can walk.

Was she bitter? No. She was grateful to have her foot and has found out what's really important in life.

The next miraculous thing I saw was a young woman dressed in flannel pajamas - I kid you not - strolling into Sharper Image. It looked like she had a white I.D. bracelet on too. "Do you think she escaped from the hospital?" I asked my newfound friend.

Oh, there were other pleasantries and curiosities as I rang. A woman from Pismo Beach told me how she volunteers her time there for worthy causes. Teenagers kicked bean bags around in the park...

And there were three more miracles: when I turned my bell over to an elderly man who rings several days a week, I decided I'd have to find another bell. I'd ruined the one I had. But when I asked to pay for it, the store owner told me to forget it if it was for The Salvation Army.

Then I went to Shells of Carmel where I found a great ceramic bell and, surprise, the owner there said she wanted to contribute it to The Salvation Army.

And the final miracle? I had left my car in a two hour zone for nearly three hours - and it wasn't ticketed.

I know Lt. Ed Loomis won't be offended by any comments I've made. This man and his lovely wife/partner Lt. Joyce Loomis both have great senses of humor.

Their staff and volunteers do a world of good for our community through programs for children, teens and adults. The Child Development Center alone served more than 25,000 meals last year.

So, to celebrate this organization's 100th birthday, Friends of The Salvation Army threw An Old English Christmas Feast and Revels at The Inn at Spanish Bay on Friday night. And it was a spectacle to behold!

First, guests gathered in a reception hall to hear The Golden Gate Boys Choir and Bellringers and to watch men and women in Elizabethan clothing enact lines from Sir Walter Scott's description of a "Feast of Long Ago":

"...The wassail round, in good round bowls,
Garnish'd with ribbons, blithely trowls.
There the huge sirloin reek'd; hard by Plum-porridge stood, and Christmas pie..."

Yes, soon after, we were served wild boar, after its bristly head had been paraded about on a gurney. I even checked to see that the ugly thing, placed on display in the hall afterward, was real. And it was.

There was much pageantry throughout the fantastic feast, ending with figgy-figgy pudding. Adorable page boys sang from table to table and trumpets blared.

A special guest was Col. Bruce Harvey from San Francisco who heads up the Northern California and Nevada Salvation Armies. He said more people are volunteering on the bells, but contributions to the buckets are down.

"We're still trying to figure out what's happening," he said.

The good news is: there is now a program whereby the children of female inmates are assured a Christmas. Volunteers go to the jails; find out about inmates' children; shop for them; and present the children with a "present from mom."

Wouldn't it be wonderful if the only army in the world was The Salvation Army?

Christmas in Carmel

A brand new fire engine red Pontiac is parked - backward in a 20-minute zone, around the corner from the fire station. The person sleeked down the street, going the wrong way; parked; and sleeked off several minutes later, still going the wrong way; and was never ticketed.

Oops!

A UPS truck pulls up in front of a kitchen shop. The driver flings open the rear door and several boxes labeled "fragile, glass, handle with care" tumble to the ground. The driver looks around, then tosses them onto his dolly and continues on to make the delivery.

Of course, we know he'll tell the store owner he dropped them... ?

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

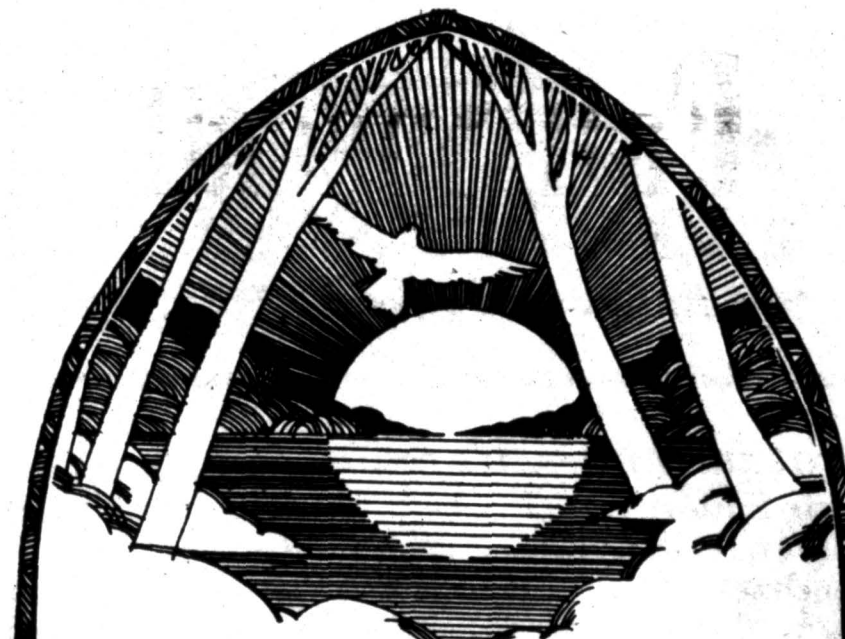

Agnes de Mille won lasting fame for transforming American musicals with her choreography for "Oklahoma!" "Brigadoon," "Carousel" and other shows. The niece of Hollywood legend Cecil B. de Mille once described herself as "a spoiled, egocentric wealthy girl who learned with difficulty to become a worker." In her 80s, she published her 12th book, "Portrait Gallery." Another book, "Reprieve," is about the 1975 stroke that paralyzed her right side and how she dealt with it.

Paul E. Garber was 9 when he saw Orville Wright demonstrate a plane for the Army at Ft. Myer, Virginia, in 1909. He grew up to become a flyer, and flew airmail with Charles Lindbergh. In 1920 he went to work for the Smithsonian Institution. At age 91 he continued to put in five days a week, as Historian Emeritus of the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum. He is credited with obtaining nearly all of the 385 planes in the museum's collection, including the Wrights' 1903 Kitty Hawk Flyer and Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis.

Grateful for bench's return Dear Editor:

We recently had a hand-made wooden bench stolen from an outside alley leading to the back entrance of our store. The bench was custom-made for us and we had it stored in our private alley to make room for a holiday display in our store.

Officer Panetta read about the stolen bench in The Carmel Pine Cone and, when he was driving down Tioga Avenue in Sand City on Nov. 27, he noticed a bench by the side of the road near a dump area. He realized the bench did not belong there and that it matched the description of ours in The Pine Cone. He picked it up and brought it into the Carmel Police Department.

We are very grateful to Officer Panetta and we very much appreciate his efforts.

His actions renewed our faith in humanity and it is nice to know there are people who care enough to go out of their way to help others.

We surely would not have been able to get our bench if the story had not been printed in The Pine Cone and Officer Panetta had not noticed it that night.

Sentencing fair, courageous Dear Editor:

Judge Anton's sentence given to the three young men convicted of setting fire to Carmel High School was both fair and, in the face of public opinion, took a lot of courage.

I speak as someone who is a graduate of Carmel High School and as the employer of one of the individual's convicted. I have been dismayed at the misinformation that has been going around and how everyone is so willing just to toss these young men away.

These three youths do not have the traits of hardened, unrepentant criminals. This is their first offense. They can be rehabilitated. The individual who works for me is a good employee — hard-working and honest. He is well liked by his fellow employees and by employees of other stores in the area. He was a good student and participated in extra-curricular activities.

I understand the other two have similar stories. It is important to note that the individual who actually set the fire said he did not intend to set the fire, that it was an accident. Expert investigation could produce no conclusive evidence to prove otherwise. In other words, they did not plead guilty to, nor were they convicted of intentional arson.

Is justice being served? Are the sentences setting a good example? If one's sense of justice demands suffering, let me assure you that the young man I know has and will continue to suffer. He has been ostracized by most of his classmates; he has lost his senior year forever; he has been slandered and threatened; he has seen his family suffer; and has had to endure a judicial process that has brought him to the point where suicide became a genuine concern.

I would not be surprised if the other two have had similar ordeals. They will now have to serve time and do community service. Believe me, the peers of these three have had their wake-up call. Anyone who suggests this sentence sends the message to other students — that it is okay to set their school on fire — must have a very low opinion of a student's intelligence or must believe they are all criminals waiting for a chance to strike.

If these three had been sent to do "hard time" at a CYA prison, where hard core criminals are incarcerated, chances are their lives would have been ruined.

They need to serve their sentence and then demonstrate their desire to be good citizens in our community. We, as a community, need to allow them a chance to do that. And if they do rehabilitate and become productive citizens, then a good example will indeed have been set for our youth.

Carmel Commentary

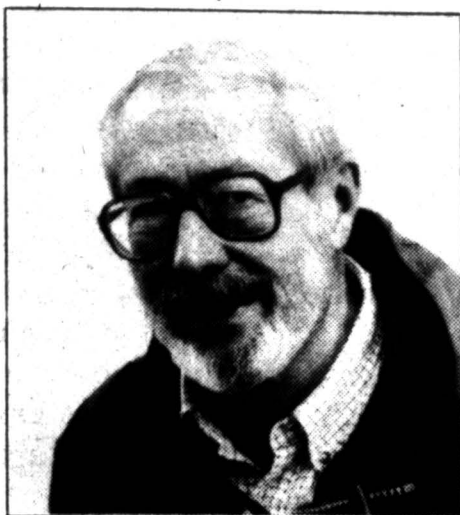

By LINDSAY HANNA

Commercial interests are not the only ones — we need a balance

AS WE enter the magic and excitement of the holiday season, this newly retired planning commissioner would like to share some of his thoughts about Carmel-by-the-Sea.

When I was first appointed to the commission in 1990, following two years on the Forest and Beach Commission, I believed that the greatest problem in our village in the forest was the construction of oversized houses on small lots.

Despite the "floor-area ratio" restrictions and open-space requirements (50 percent or more of lot coverage), Carmelites were outspoken in criticism of "million dollar houses, six feet apart." The volume of this complaint has shrunk as fewer new large homes are being built due to inflated land prices and the generally bleak economic climate.

LINDSAY HANNA

Today, my principle worry is the growing pressure from the business community to stimulate increased tourism and attract more business for our shops, restaurants, inns, and so on. The goal may be worthy: to help our merchants and managers achieve the needed level of profits to survive successfully in their business endeavors. There is also a beneficial impact on the city: More hotel guests and spending in Carmel translates to more tax revenue to pay for city services.

For example, a 25 percent increase in tourist-generated taxes for this city would go a long way to solving Carmel's current budget problems.

However, do Carmelites really want a "busier" community? I am not sure of the answer. The recent controversy over Measure H (rezoning parts of the business district) was based on some feelings that the proposed zoning changes would intensify Carmel's commercial area. The final vote was a virtual tie, with the zoning changes approved by a fraction of 1 percent.

Recently, the reports of the Parking Committee and the Landlord/Tenant Committee have received considerable attention. One of the main themes of the former is to promote employee parking out of the business area (into the residential zone) to free up parking spaces for shoppers. The latter report is a list of recommended actions the city should take to promote increased quality tourism in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

The recent national television exposure for Carmel-by-the-Sea — in the form of ABC's Good Morning America — was cheered by some because it showcased our lovely village by the ocean, but cheered by yet others because it could entice people across the land to visit our community and spend money here.

I personally enjoy walking about our village (and doing considerable shopping!) during the holiday season. The festive atmosphere and throngs of visitors are a joy to behold. Not just because the result is more money in cash registers (and the city treasury), but also because it demonstrates what an attractive, hospitable and friendly place Carmel really is.

On the other hand, there is something precious about January before the golf tournament comes to the peninsula. It's easy to find a place to park in the business district, and one can get a reservation in most any restaurant (or even just walk in and find a vacant table).

Walking the beach — our real gemstone — is a peaceful event. I realize the innkeepers desire to have every room occupied, the restaurateur wants every table full, and shopkeepers would like a steady flow of buying customers. But, perhaps once in awhile, they might be willing to have some slow days so that the village can rest a bit.

I wish our business people a most successful holiday season and a profitable 1994. Also, I ask that we residents be forgiven for wishing for a quiet village for some parts of the year. Fifty-two hectic weeks of holiday, golf or music festival activity would be difficult to accept. We live in paradise, complete with beautiful scenery, fine shops and restaurants, all of which we would not have without our tourists.

But in this paradise, we need a balance between a thriving business community and peaceful residential areas. All Carmelites need to work together to preserve this delicate balance and ensure the future of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Best wishes to all for a joyous holiday!

Lindsay Hanna first visited Carmel in 1953 as a weekend tourist. In 1973, he and Rebecca purchased a vacation home on San Antonio, which is now their permanent residence.

System plays cruel joke on victims and families

ON DEC. 4, a two-month search for Polly Klaas ended and a nationwide outpouring of sorrow began. The tragedy also brought forth justified public outrage over the violent, senseless crimes we continue to see and read about everyday, as well as the sense that there must be more we can do to keep career criminals behind bars longer.

There are things we can and must do. To begin, we need "truth in sentencing."

In California, we currently have a sentencing structure under which a convicted criminal may serve as little as 50 percent of his sentence if, while in prison, the inmate behaves well. The definition of "good behavior" means that the prisoner didn't commit any criminal actions such as setting a cell on fire or stabbing another inmate. In other words, convicted criminals can get one day shaved off their sentences for every day served.

In my view, this is a cruel joke to play on victims and their families. When they hear the judge sentence a perpetrator to a certain number of years behind bars, that criminal ought to serve all or most of that time, not 50 percent.

When I was in Congress in 1984, I worked to change the sentencing structure at the federal level so that inmates are now required to serve a minimum of 85 percent of their sentences. We came to the 85 percent figure only after being convinced by correctional officials that they must have a tool to control the behavior of inmates (such as the promise of some time off for good behavior).

That system has now been in effect on the federal level for about 8 years — and it has proven to be successful! I believe that an 85 percent minimum service requirement on the state level in California would provide both a greater sense of justice to victims as well as have a deterrent effect on crime.

We must also consider the fact that, according to one study, 7 percent of the criminals commit at least 50 percent of the crimes. If these criminals are in prison for a longer period of time for each offense, the public will be safer. That's why we need a "Three strikes and You're Out" law here in California. Whether enacted by an initiative or by the legislature, it must become the policy of California that if you commit three serious or violent felonies, you earn yourself a 25 years-to-life sentence.

More opinion, pages 22-23

For the sake of murdered children like Polly Klaas of Petaluma, Kimba Reynolds of Fresno, or the thousands of other victims of violent crime, there must come a point when we say to the criminal: "Sorry, no more chances on the outside. You've used them all up."

Polly Klaas: Child's death demands the search for response

By JOHN DETRO

*If only I could nudge you from this sleep,
My maimed darling, my skittery pigeon.*

Over this damp grave I speak the words of my love:

I, with no rights in this matter. . . .

—Theodore Roethke

THUS DID poet Roethke talk to Jane, his student who was killed in a fall from a horse. I borrow the lines as one way of addressing Polly Klaas, 12-year-old victim of kidnap and murder.

Of addressing her family as well. Christmas nears. They'll be without this youngster whose bright face looks out from the cover of People magazine for Dec. 20. She's called America's Child, but she was theirs first, in better times, at those joyous times when she had Yuletide fun in Carmel, year after year, with her paternal grandparents — Joe and Betty Jane Klaas.

FIRST PERSON

Just imagine what family members still must face: the holidays, the next court appearance of confessed kidnaper and slayer Richard Allen Davis (Dec. 28) — and what would have been Polly's 13th birthday party (Jan. 3).

My urge to speak out, here, was made only sharper by a long conversation with writer Joe. Today he's back with the Polly Klaas Foundation in Petaluma as board members and volunteers restructure. They'll undertake legislative advocacy on child safety issues, help search out other missing kids, design and put out child-based education programs. But Joe was home for a few days, resting, chatting with old pals.

Permission granted

Joe Klaas is a retired media executive. Smiling in a manner both knowing and kind, he said upfront that any comments he made were "fair game," newswise.

He revealed that film actress Winona Ryder — who put up the $200,000 reward for information leading to Polly's return — was prepared "to give us three million dollars to buy back Polly from the kidnapper. Winona and Polly both had their first stage experience at Petaluma Junior High; there was such a strong identification on Winona's part. The FBI talked her out of (the gift), saying that much money would inspire too many crank calls."

All of her life, Joe said, Polly pulled back from any hint of violence. "She wouldn't watch it on TV," he said. "Even though we went everywhere together, she was afraid of San Francisco and Oakland — afraid that violence would erupt."

"Maybe she knew something in her heart," said our friend Kristin Windju — working woman, spouse, mother of a small daughter. "Maybe she didn't have the words, but always knew that violence would come and get her."

"Yeah, I think so," Joe said in a near whisper. "Going to sleep, she always had to have the hall light on. I know she wishes for us the absolute absence of violence."

"Her spirit is alive and she'd want us to oppose violence against children," Kristin added. "I suspect she's a messenger in that regard. Her story and picture have touched millions of people."

(Kristin wasn't alone with that opinion. Search center volunteers speak of Polly in the present tense; esoteric literature says we have pre-birth power of approval over Life Tasks. "I believe each soul decides what role it will play on Earth," education activist Virginia Connelly of Carmel said in a letter to area journals. "Polly may have been a 12-year-old child, but she was an old soul; perhaps this was her soul's gift to humanity.")

The grip of rage

Then Joe shared a terribly sad truth. "In their grief and rage, some of my family members have given up their faith in God. They're asking how God could let such a thing happen."

God's too big; I surely possess no answers. I often don't get the questions right. And yet, after Joe looked at his wristwatch and left that place, there was the deep and strong desire to touch in with the rest of Polly's family. To listen and then to say — what?

The world was about to welcome the Christ Child once more, and certain suffering hearts had closed themselves to Godhead, who was and is the Father, Mother, Giver. Was that any of my business — any at all?

Perhaps so. I cared about Joe and his wife very much and, like those millions cited by Kristin, had come to love Polly as if she were my own daughter. Polly couldn't abide violence. From personal experience, I knew that rejection of God was a violent act — the rage, the desert, Dark Night of the Soul, really the rejection of one's own capacity to seek and create. Out of that experience ("hitting bottom") came a way of hearing hearts and not just words, but what in the world could I offer Polly's father and mother and siblings and aunts?

Christian churches save Jan. 6 as the Feast of the Epiphany — the appearance, the presence, the Christ Child found by those Three Kings. Polly's birth anniversary could be seen as another epiphany. Because of her death, this nation's vision of child protection had heightened. "Like 'primitive' cultures," Joe said, "we all need to take care of the children." And greater love hath no kid than to give her life for her friends. . . .

Heightened, yes. Could all that be but hopeful babble? Heightened for how long?

"Usually in these tragedies," said Detective Sgt. Warren (Pete) Poitras of Carmel Police Department, "people keep awareness for a little while and then go back to sleep. We've become so desensitized. With Polly, let's not go back to sleep. Look around. Appreciate. Life's so damned fragile."

Yes. And Joe Klaas said: "If these were the Middle Ages, little Polly might be made a saint by popular acclamation." Yes. That's how it was done in the old days; folks noted the sweetness and the miracles and chose certain individuals.

But how would this affect their rejection of God? Was there anything real and pertinent to share? I prayed on the matter and then let it all go.

'In their grief and rage, some of my family members have given up their faith in God. They're asking how God could let such a thing happen.'

— Joe Klaas

What I sought came in a thick paperback novel loaned by local poet and educator John Dotson. Within the thousands and thousands of words was a single, fast-passing reference to the Jewish sages who went underground to build a wisdom literature while held prisoner in Egypt. One wrote (and I paraphrase):

Do not judge God — for God too has a broken heart.

The Son; the schoolgirl

Those words turned my head upside down: wakeup call, internal revolution. Of course. If the words were poetic, their impact was literal as a mule's kick.

First of all, God's everything — the saint, the criminal, the clown, the carriers of broken hearts. But the words were even more specific to Godhead. The Son was sent in full knowledge of the Son's brutal treatment at Golgotha. From the split instant of her heavenly conception, Polly had an earthly history known in full detail by the Maker. (Whether one agrees with these suppositions, the impact was timely and true. How might I give more instead of looking to receive?)

So what we do can break God's heart. And God keeps playing the completely serious, two-way game. That means we're all in this together — no privileged observers, no one above the bloody and lovely mix, not even Godhead getting a free ride.

Because — why? Maybe because we're in no sense finalized. Maybe because free will is a very young experiment, and God cannot back off, even when God weeps for us and God's heart breaks with the hearts of Mother Mary and Polly's kin.

God can know the broken heart, and hangs in there with us anyway. We're all in it together.

Merry Christmas, Polly. You led me to pursue something here, and I believe you're alive and glad.

Personal Perspective

By PAUL WOLF

When there is no conscience, jail is quarantine, not punishment

IN THE wake of the Polly Klaas tragedy, there are a couple of questions that have been stirring in my mind.

1) Of what purpose is "punishing" people like Richard Allen Davis, who confesses to abducting and killing a 12-year-old Petaluman?

Very little, actually, and I will soon elaborate.

2) Does it make sense to lock up people merely because they have the "potential" to commit crimes again? Absolutely. When a person commits the first serious crime, society has the obligation to assess the likely danger presented by the felon.

For Davis, half a life behind bars did not fashion a conscience where none existed. Surely, the more we learn about the frightening recidivism rates of career criminals, the less apt we are to invest great hope that incarceration leads to reform.

Then there is another premise — namely, that the value and purpose of punishment is lost on those who lack a solid moral sense, who cannot appreciate the necessary connection between their loss of freedom and a specific act they have committed.

PAUL WOLF

Images of Davis
There was Davis — in his first court appearance, smirking, uttering taunting remarks. If he was in a drug-induced haze that night, as it was reported, where was his anguish the day after?

The record of this twice-convicted kidnapper, paroled in June, speaks for itself. What is broken in this man's psyche?

Can anyone atone for killing an innocent stranger? There is a strange kind of logic that moves me to answer no. Someone who is capable of such an act is, by definition, not capable of atoning for it.

One of the reasons the Polly Klaas story captured the heart and imagination of the nation was its random, savage, pointless nature. It is much easier to fathom a kidnapping that occurs, say, in the midst of a custody battle where there are intense family bonds.

In the Klaas case, we are inclined to view the culprit as sick, not bad in the usual sense. We are left more with nausea than indignation.

To discuss this distinction, however, is to play with our important notions of free will and personal responsibility because it somehow makes the guilty seem less so: All people are created equal, and all will be punished according to the gravity of their crimes.

But the explosion of random and violent acts we now witness — especially among juveniles — represents an erosome harbinger of disease. This is a cause for relief, not exultation.

A greater effort may need to be taken to distinguish between those classes of felons who remain capable of returning to society and those who do not.

Society has neither the means nor the desire to treat all violent offenders as mental health rather than criminal cases. There are few remaining who would stand up and declare that Allen needs a cure, or "rehabilitation," not punishment.

The proposed "three-strikes, you're-out" initiative now afoot understands sion of the moral sense. Society cannot function without that thing called conscience.

Philosopher Bertrand Russell, writing in the early part of this century, asserted that the punishments imposed after these horrible events exist only to serve the vindictive impulses of those who grieve. If this is a valid observation, how do we justify punishment?

Seeking answers

For now, we may have no choice but to regard jail terms less as punishment than as quarantine.

I never could understand the urge to celebrate when a profound punishment has been handed down to a criminal. A person is removed from society, like that the paramount goal has to be to keep the streets safe.

Is it criminal for society to keep sick individuals permanently in jail, without the chance of walking the streets again? Unless someone can think of a better way, there may be no other choice.

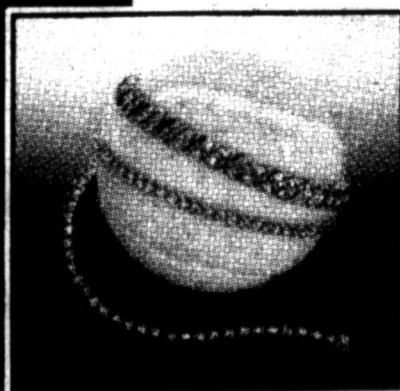

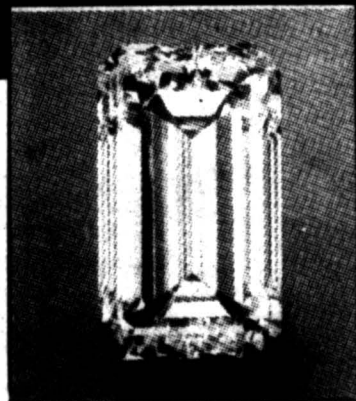

Admittedly, since punishment fails to accomplish the goals of reform, deterrent or atonement, our criminal justice system is far from ideal. Yet our concerns must rest first with the Pollys of this world, not with the defective minds of the likes of Richard Davis.

Padres enduring young season's ups and downs

■ CHS gains 'consolation' from Invitational; Monterey captures crown for 3rd time

By DAN SILVER

EVERY SEASON has its ups and downs. Some days a team will come out with high intensity, while other days that same team will look like it doesn't care about the game.

Last weekend's 47th annual Carmel Invitational was a microcosm of this fact for Carmel High, which won the consolation championship game after suffering a first-round upset.

Monterey High, which lost to the Padres earlier this season, took its third Carmel Invitational title with a 42-38 victory against Seaside. MHS also won the 1988 and 1989 tournaments.

Salinas took third place when it knocked off Leigh, the team that defeated CHS in the first round. Palma finished seventh. Here is how the Padres fared:

RLS soccer team shuts out Carmel; boys' basketball team shines again

AN UNUSUAL THING happened to the Robert Louis Stevenson varsity soccer team Wednesday, Dec. 15. It wasn't the fact it dominated cross-town rival Carmel High in a 2-0 victory, nor was it the fact they left for Christmas break enjoying a 2-0 league record.

It was that the Pirates drew a crowd to their match. And we're not talking three or four bystanders — but there were some 25 people, not to mention the presence of two field hockey teams and a large lacrosse platoon.

This year's soccer team is putting on a show. The team has become more offensive than in the past, putting more shots on goal and receiving even more opportunities from all-league contender Matt Miller and his 50-yard flip throw-ins.

Highlighted by Leland Felsenthal's monster kicks and Gianni Allioti's impressive saves, the squad's defence also has improved.

In the match against Carmel, Colin Johnson and Miller, on one of his acrobatic throw-ins, scored goals to provide the winning margin.

The team next plays Jan. 5 against perennial league powerhouse King City, but RLS Head Coach Peter Ulrich is confident.

"I see them (King City) as very beatable," Ulrich said, adding that it depended on each individual's discipline in training over the vacation.

If the Pirates do beat King City — and they've done it in the past — look for them to be competing in the Central Coast Section playoffs.

■ BOYS BASKETBALL

The Pirates' varsity team proved yet again that it could play with the best of them.

The Pirates won two of the three games they played in last weekend's Gilroy Tournament to win the consolation championship. RLS' lone loss came against Gunderson High, which captured the Scattini Tournament played two weeks ago in Salinas.

Gunderson 65, RLS 57

Though the Pirates were knocked into the loser's bracket by this powerhouse, they gained a definite measure of respect. Chris Watkins and Seth Stout each scored 16 points to pace Stevenson in the Thursday, Dec. 16 game.

Though they had a battle on their hands, Gunderson moved its record to 8-1.

RLS 65, James Lick 55

Once again tri-captain Stout led the way in Friday afternoon's drubbing of James Lick as he tallied 21 points and sank a trio of three-point bombs.

A tribute to the team's balance, three other players also reached double figures in scoring — senior captains Watkins (11) and Nate Williams (13), and sophomore Sean Jackson (13).

RLS 66, Live Oak 64

Saturday's matchup versus Live Oak's Acorns resulted in an exciting consolation title bout. RLS found itself enjoying an 18-point lead early into the fourth quarter when Live Oak ignited for a 29-point surge. Though the Acorns nearly doubled the Pirates final period scoring, Stevenson managed to hold them off and bring home the consolation prize.

Watkins, who was named to the all-tournament team, topped RLS scorers with 16 points.

After entering three exceptionally competitive tournaments in as many weekends, the Pirates have successfully showcased their potential. When Mission Trail Athletic League play begins on Jan. 4, one can expect the Pirates to be serious title contenders.

This afternoon, RLS hosts University High in a non-league 4:30 p.m. game.

Oops — Sam's a senior

IN INTRODUCING Samantha Silverman and Mike Thompson last week as our new Pirate Sports Scene columnists, we referred to both of them as juniors. Thompson is a junior, but Silverman is a senior. Sorry about that, Sam.

PADRES from page 25 tried valiantly to give Carmel the victory, but even his two clutch three-pointers toward the end of the game couldn't save the Padres.

If Carmel had won, the "final four" would have featured the Padres, Monterey, Salinas and Seaside — an attractive local quartet.

Carmel 60, Terra Nova 47

Blessings can come in strange ways. The Padres found this out the next night in their victory over Terra Nova.

Team leader Powell was ejected midway through the third quarter for his second technical foul. Powell, who had scored 21 points, was responsible for more than half of the team's points at the time of the ejection.

Instead of rolling over and dying, the rest of the Padres, minus their floor leader, stepped up to put away the win.

Joey Bernhard led the fourth-quarter effort, scoring most of his 16 points in that period. Ryan Sanchez also looked good, scoring 8 points.

Carmel 57, Santa Cruz 43

Balance is a trait the Padres haven't shown too much of thus far in the season, but perhaps the last few games are an indication that Carmel may be leaning more in that direction.

Three players scored in double figures against Santa Cruz in Saturday afternoon's consolation matchup. Joining Powell in double figures were Joey Bernhard with 15, and Ryan Sanchez with 13. Powell, the lone Carmel player on the all-tournament team, finished with 21.

The Padres never looked back after jumping out to an 18-9 advantage in the first quarter.

CARMEL HIGH takes its 7-3 non-league record into tonight's home game against San Lorenzo Valley. The tip-off is scheduled for 7 p.m.

HOPE TO MAKE YOUTH CENTER THEIR 'BASE CAMP'

Top fencers joust in Carmel prior to national circuit start

By SCOTT BREARTON

FIVE OF the nation's top fencers paid a visit to the Carmel Youth Center last week, preparing for a series of circuit events beginning in January. All are ranked among the top 24 "sabre" fencers in the country.

Among them are Boris Sokol and Sergei Mindirgasov, who both competed on the Russian Olympic fencing team in the 1980s. American fencers rounding out "Team Monterey" include Jeffrey Miller, Greg Zimmerman and Scott Lewicki.

Mindirgasov, a five-time world champion who captured a silver medal in the 1988 games, defected from his homeland — the former Soviet Union — in 1991. He now resides in Pacific Grove.

According to Miller, who is being trained by Mindirgasov in preparation for the U.S. Nationals in June, his Russian comrade is "probably the highest-ranked fencer in the country."

"Working with these guys six days a week, three hours a day can put us on the national team," Miller said. "They're that good. It's like having John McEnroe as your tennis coach."

Miller is a Los Angeles attorney, Lewicki is a NASA engineer who lives in Pasadena, and Zimmerman owns the Larchwood Inn in Pacific Grove.

mally worn during tournament play.

But protective gear is always a must. The men paired off and engaged in "five-touch bouting," after which a critique took place.

"There are different styles, but the themes are constant," Miller said, noting that in sabre fencing, points can be scored only above the waist, and "cutting" as well as "pointing" is allowed.

Together, this five-man team competes for the U.S. Fencing Association, which sponsors a series of fencing tournaments. Beginning in January, the team will compete on the national circuit, traveling to San Francisco, Atlanta, New Jersey and, in June, to Utah — for the U.S. Fencing Nationals.

The swordsmen were grateful to their host (CYC director Pat Lenz). While these "fabulous five" normally work out at the YMCA when they're in the area, Miller said he remembered the CYC had a nice hardwood floor and open space — ideal for fencing practice. Because the Monterey YMCA sponsors many functions, gym availability there is sometimes a problem.

"We'd like to make (the CYC) our base camp," Miller added.

BEAT THE EDITOR

EVERY WEEK during the football season, Doug Thompson, managing editor of The Carmel Pine Cone, will challenge a guest forecaster in picking the top 10 games from the pro and collegiate slate.

LAST WEEK: Buoyed by victories from two slight underdogs (Cincinnati over LA Rams and Phoenix over Seattle), The Editor had a triumphant Sunday en route to a win over Bill Wehde, insurance agent in downtown Carmel. Bill got the early jump Saturday when Denver downed Chicago, but witnessed all three of Sunday's key picks go awry. The Editor finished 7-3; Bill 4-6. Overall for the season, The Editor's record moves to 8-5-3.

THIS WEEK: Craig Hohenberger, director of the Ventana Wilderness Society and an eighth grade teacher at Carmel Middle School, is the Week #17 challenger.

MIRA SHALLCROSS KAMADA

Local artist's surrealist oils weave spell of fascination

By MOLLY D. WHITEHEAD

ARTIST MIRA Shallcross Kamada vividly remembers the wonder she felt when she first began painting at the age of 16. It amazed her that, as she says, "I could sit in front of a still life and paint it, and it would come out looking real." At the time, Kamada's ability to render the world realistically convinced her that she had artistic talent.

Now, Kamada says, "I don't feel that I was painting as an artist until after grad school, when I discovered paintings as a means of telling a story." Kamada's personal definition of artistry has evolved over the years as she has come into her own as a painter.

She observes that this growth process, which is necessary, is nonetheless difficult. "It's hard for young artists to be individuals because they want to be successful. I see so many artists in their early to mid-20s painting whatever's in fashion."

'WINE AND ROSES' shows off Kamada's masterful use of line and light.

The challenge of nurturing individual vision is compounded by the fact that some creators are their own harshest critics. "I suspect that artists tend to be judgmental, almost neurotic, about their work. They love things that aren't worthy of love and hate things that deserve respect."

Contemplating fragments

As Kamada's view of art has evolved, her subject matter has shifted from figurative still lifes to surrealistic dreamscapes. When asked how she taps into subconscious concerns, Kamada answers, "I spend a lot of time contemplating a fragment of an idea. Then the images start coming." Some of the images which Kamada juxtaposes in fertile combinations arise from her daily life, while others seem to visit her unbidden.

An oil painting called "Timepiece" depicts a bright red piano, the top of which looks like a violin, with a clock mounted on its side. In the foreground are the curling petals of calla lilies rendered in brilliant yellows and oranges. At left is the ghostly figure of a swan, the graceful curve of its neck re-traced several times in a visual echo.

Kamada cites "creativity and self-development" as the themes of the painting. "I was taking my first piano class and felt frustrated by my inability to keep time. I also wanted to try something different from the usual ways of organizing space in a painting. I was also happy about leaving a drudge job and having more time for creative pursuits. These experiences came together in the painting."

Art as talisman

One of the work's unusual touches is the shriveled blossom in its foreground. Kamada remarks with a wry smile, "My husband says I always have to do something like that. He thinks it's morbid. But these works aren't painted as decorative things. The first artists, prehistoric cavemen, made their art as objects of power, not as decorations for their caves. We've gotten away from the idea that art is something with power."

Kamada's works serve as personal talismans and reminders of certain passages in her life. The artist often listens to music, talk radio or poetry while she paints. She finds that these stimuli somehow leave their mark on the paintings. "When I look at a painting 10 years later, I'll remember what music I was listening to or what phone conversation was running through my mind as I worked."

Kamada's paintings resonate hauntingly with the viewer. Even when one cannot arrive at a neat explanation of their meaning, or perhaps because one cannot, these paintings cast a spell of fascination. They are rendered with sure self-possession, clarity of line, and appreciation of the sensuousness of color. Kamada paints exclusively in oil, maintaining that "you just can't get the subtle range of values and hues with acrylics."

Because of the highly personal, symbolic language of Kamada's paintings, one is bound to feel a more intimate connection with some than others. One of my favorites is "Departure." This painting is a surrealistic rendering of an area toward the end of Monterey's Municipal Wharf #2, where skiffs belonging to the large commercial fishing boats are tied up.

The dock's heavy wood beams loom over the fragile skiffs. Posted along the dock like large, tyrannical eyes are three clocks, each telling a different hour. Bits of debris in the skiffs — an empty hand net, piles of numbers — bear silent testimony to the riches of fish and time which have slipped through catchers' hands.

A fourth clock seems to glow in the sky like a moon, casting a silvery light over the scene. Clocks are a recurring symbol in Kamada's work, and a familiar one to aficionados of surrealist art. With its focus on time, "Departure" reminds me of the Dali painting of melting clocks draped over tree branches.

Angel kisses

Recently, in her work "Angel Kiss," Kamada made an attempt to paint directly from a dream. "I thought this kind of painting would be really universal, because we don't edit our dreams."

Kamada dreamt that "men and women in a cityscape were catching small, illuminated objects falling from the sky. They were calling them 'angel kisses.' But when people caught them, they shriveled up."

Ironically, Kamada had a similar ex-

Three Spirits Gallery in PG accents diversity, community

OWNER AND artist Susan Collins realized a dream come true with the recent opening of the Three Spirits Gallery on 17th Street between Lighthouse and Central in Pacific Grove.

The name and the logo of three dancing women was inspired by the close friendship of artists Collins, Susan Platz and Marianne Levine. While Platz and Levine do not take an active part in day to day operations at the gallery at this time, their work has a permanent home there. The gallery opened its doors with the paintings by Collins, photography by Platz, and three-dimensional works by Levine.

Over the last three months, Three Spirits has expanded to include more than 15 artists, many of them local. Painter Mira Shallcross Kamada is among those represented by the gallery.

Shows are scheduled regularly throughout 1994 to introduce new work to the community. From Jan. 18 through Feb. 26 the gallery will host a two-man show by painters Darrell Fusaro and John Dillon.

Collins is currently working on establishing a program through which artists and local businesses can donate art materials to local schools.

Shows for Pacific Grove High School art students and local senior citizens are also in the works.

Three Spirits is open Tuesday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday and Sunday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Further information about the gallery is available by calling 649-6233.

The three spirits for whom PG's newest gallery is named: artists Susan Collins, Marianne Levine and Susan Platz.

Taste Buds

CALIFORNIA MARKET A place for every occasion

JUST IMAGINE relaxing in an open air restaurant high on a hill overlooking one of the most beautiful coastline vistas in the world.

Then imagine being served the best Ramos Fizz you've ever tasted in your life. The orange flavor of the Ramos Fizz is foamy and delicate. It's the perfect choice on a Sunday morning while you're deciding what to have for breakfast.

Well, believe it or not, you don't have to stretch your imagination to make this a reality. It's all possible when you dine at the California Market Restaurant at the Highlands Inn just south of Carmel along Highway 1.

California Market's ambiance is warm and casual, and the view from the restaurant's deck is breathtaking. It overlooks Monterey Pines and Cypress trees throughout the Highlands on down to Spindrift Drive and further out to the Pacific Ocean.

For the early risers, there are a variety of breakfast choices at the California Market.

Breakfast delight

For starters, there's the Continental breakfast with homemade muffins, scones, croissants and cinnamon rolls. One of these, along with whole baked apples with maple syrup, fresh squeezed orange juice — or another Ramos Fizz — is a delightful way to begin any day.

Another highly recommended choice is the daily frittata, an open faced Italian omelette. The combination of chicken sausage, Swiss cheese, red onions, tomatoes and mushrooms is wonderful.

For something a little more unusual, try the chicken hash with poached eggs and fresh herb hollandaise. The hash is a combination of chicken, potatoes, carrots, onions and is heavily laced with herbs, especially sage. The hollandaise texture is perfect with just the right amount of lemon flavoring to make it memorable.

Most likely, even after a leisurely breakfast, you will want to stay a while longer to enjoy the spectacular view and a Illy Caffè Espresso or Cappuccino.

Enticing lunch

If you missed breakfast, lunch time at the California Market is equally as enticing.

For light lunch diners, the seasonal fresh fruit salad with poppyseed and raspberry yogurt sauces is just right. Or, for a heartier appetite, the grilled Ceasar chicken breast sandwich with shaved parmesan and Ceasar mayonnaise, served on country bread, is an excellent choice.

For diners who are slightly more adventurous, the peppered ham on molasses bread with melted brie and beefsteak tomato may be what you are looking for.

Picnic basket

Now, if viewing the Pacific Ocean and its lush coastline from above is not enough, and you want to hike down for a closer look, the California Market's friendly and efficient staff will make up a picnic basket for you to take along on your trek.

There are three different choices ranging from a Point Lobos Fitness lunch for one to On The Go sandwiches for two and the deluxe Highlander picnic basket for two, which includes either chardonnay wine or champagne.

So, for every occasion, dining at the Highlands Inn California Market is a special experience.

The California Market is located in the Carmel Highlands, four miles south of Carmel and is open daily for breakfast from 7:30 to 11 a.m. and for lunch and dinner from 11:30 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Further information is available by calling 624-3801.

Carmel artist Rosemary Miner shows her seascapes at Coast Galleries

'PEBBLE BEACH Moonlight,' an oil painting by Rosemary Miner, is on display as part of a collection of the artist's seascapes at Coast Galleries.

CARMEL ARTIST Rosemary Miner is now exclusively represented by Coast Galleries in Pebble Beach and Big Sur.

Miner has loved the ocean since childhood. However, it was not until she was well into her career as an artist that she tried her hand at painting the seascapes for which she is known.

"I studied all styles and subject matter when I was a student at UCLA," Miner recalls, "but when I looked at paintings of the sea, all I saw was frozen whipped cream. The ocean never looked natural, and I never attempted it myself."

But inspiration struck as Miner and her husband were driving up the Coast one weekend, returning to their home in Carmel.

"We were looking out the window at this dramatically surging ocean and Wagner's Tempest happened to be playing on the car radio. The combination was electrifying. I was very moved by the blending of the rhythms of the waves and music. It was almost like watching a dance."

"Since then I've devoted myself totally to painting the moods of the sea. I never look at the ocean to paint now without classical music in the background."

I Cantori continues tradition of excellence with Yule concert

By LYN BRONSON

THE CARMEL Mission Basilica always inspires a sense of awe. Its old-world ambience takes us a step backward in time to a mysterious age before science and technology became gods.

That it invariably becomes a perfect setting for music from earlier centuries, many performing arts organizations on the Monterey Peninsula have discovered.

Class act

So it is that Dr. Sal Ferrantelli continues to bring I Cantori di Carmel to the Carmel Mission Basilica each December for its annual Christmas concert.

This is a class act, with meticulously chosen music, a well-trained chorus, excellent soloists and the support of the Monterey Bay Chamber Orchestra.

Even the minor details are classy, such as the lighting, the concert attire of the participants and the elegantly printed programs.

I Cantori's Christmas concerts are never "pops" concerts. You will not hear "Jingle Bells" or Leroy Anderson's "Sleighride." The programs are challenging for performers and listeners alike.

It is certain that the structuring of a concert program is a serious matter for Ferrantelli, for there is always a clear sense of order and organization.

This program was no exception. The first half was devoted to three 19th century, romantic versions of Ave Maria by Brahms, Verdi and Rachmaninoff, sandwiched in between a smoothly flowing motet by Palestrina and a Magnificat by Giacomo Puccini, Sr., the grandfather of the composer of La Boheme and Madame Butterfly.

In the Puccini piece, soprano Leberto Renfro and baritone Charles Geren proved themselves very able soloists.

Incidentally, the program notes stated that Geren, a member of I Cantori di Carmel since 1984, performed during World War II in various service and community organizations.

Frankly, Geren looked far too young to have served in World War II, so perhaps like Puccini's grandson he is a third generation entertainer.

After intermission, soprano Linda Purdy, tenor Michael York and baritone Alan Gilbert appeared as soloists in Bach's Cantata No. 142, Uns ist ein Kind geboren (To Us a Child is Born). This Cantata represents Bach in the Italian style — loaded with melodic sequences, constant dominant-tonic alternation and a persistent motoric rhythmic drive.

Oboe duet

Baritone soloist Alan Gilbert easily filled the Basilica with his rich, sonorous voice, imparting a good deal of charm to his role. Tenor Michael York, in the aria "Jesus, I give Thanks," was accompanied by a beautiful oboe duet obbligato played with style by Donna Forster and Diane Machado.

And as always Linda Purdy charmed with her graceful articulation and vocal dexterity.

Mendelssohn's Christus, Part I gave us an opportunity to hear chorus member Shirley A. Hubbard step into the limelight during the opening recitativo.

In the second section, "Where is the Newborn King?" the men's voices of the chorus created a pleasing effect heightened by a very effective pizzicato bass obbligato.

In Ottorino Respighi's "Land to the Nativity," which closed the evening's concert, a lovely orchestral introduction featured the Monterey Bay Symphony's excellent woodwind section.

In the role of the Angel, soprano Kathleen Nitz's magnificent voice soared effortlessly through the Basilica.

Michael York as the Shepherd matched Nitz in sonority against the male chorus humming softly in the background — what a splendid effect!

This is an attractive work, beautifully performed, and a most fitting end to this festive concert.

Campion's 'The Piano' is fresh look at Victorian morals

By CRAIG ARNOTT

"THE VOICE you hear is not my speaking voice, but my mind's voice."

So begins the sparse narration from Ada (Holly Hunter), a mute woman who is sent from Scotland to New Zealand to marry a prominent settler. She brings only her daughter and a few belongings — including a baby grand piano.

The Piano is a fine, intelligent film that puts a spin on the conventional view of Victorian behavior. Lushly photographed and adroitly acted, the film allows Director Jane Campion to present more of a fable than a movie.

The characters are strong and willful, but they fall within the strictly defined lines of a morality play in this 19th century setting. And the action, while gaining necessary dramatic momentum, tumbles toward a predictable climax. If the audience can overlook this and focus on the beauty and grace of the production, The Piano will succeed in its suspension of disbelief.

Ada and her daughter Flora (Anna Paquin) are met on a desolate New Zealand shore by a few natives and Ada's new husband Stewart (Sam Neill), a grim imperialist who is reluctant to move the heavy piano up a steep, muddy path to the settlement. Ada and Flora eventually enlist the help of Baines (Harvey Keitel), a hardened immigrant with unfinished Maori tattoos on his face.

Once Stewart and Ada are lodged in their simple house, they treat each other with awkward stiffness, and Stewart's pathetic attempts at affection are met with icy glares from Ada, whose true love seems to be her music.

Baines, however, is cautiously intrigued by Ada's delicate, soulful playing and asks Stewart if he would like to swap the piano for a large parcel of Baines' land. Ada balks at this idea, but Stewart is unmoved. He instructs Ada to give Baines piano lessons.

Before the first lesson can begin it is clear Baines has other plans. He offers the piano back to Ada, but only if she will grant him "favors" for each black key. Ada submits, at first intent on retrieving her cherished voice but soon becoming attracted by the frank sensuality of her student.

Bonding of misfits

It is this bonding of misfits that has invited much praise for The Piano. The treatment of sexuality is subdued and, at first, genuinely romantic. Campion's camera gazes on Ada's small white neck, or Baines' gnarled hands. In time, the audience will find itself turning into a pack of voyeurs as Ada and Baines' relationship leaves nothing to the imagination.

The performances are generally very good, with two noteworthy exceptions. Paquin is remarkable as Ada's precocious, observant daughter Flora. Her expressions are keenly accurate and often unexpected — out of the entire cast, she seems the most true. And Neill provides Stewart with a painful sense of regret and fear behind the shell of a conquering European. Together, the two actors stretch the tight confines of the story.

Hunter is strong as Ada, and her pinched face befits the repression associated with the era. It is good to see Keitel soften a little (after raw performances in Reservoir Dogs and Bad Lieutenant) and give Baines a quiet civility. He does retain his characteristic intensity, but here it is less forceful. And a few will notice those bowed shoulders and barrel chest disarmingly resemble something out of Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles.

Campion wisely chooses to avoid handling the story with the kind of epic sprawl we'd imagine someone like John Huston envisioning. Instead, she films with mainly tight shots that focus on the characters, with the surrounding jungle region a convenient metaphor for the clogged emotion of the era. But a few of the nature shots are over-filtered. So instead of providing a look approaching magic realism, they come across as artificial.

In all, The Piano is both a character study and a fresh glimpse into an age whose passions are often overlooked.

Nopunintended, but the late Leo Abinante set the tone. After opening the family business in downtown Monterey, he was active with civic matters and making sure would-be players got proper teachers. He served on the original Monterey Jazz Festival board.

Well, son Gene Abinante let the other shoe drop a few days ago. It had been rumored that he was considering retirement. Gene told this column that Abinante Music has been sold — and that the new owners will take over operations on Jan. 1.

Brother Bob Abinante, good guy, jazz pianist who helped Gene run the store, died of cancer several months ago. Things there just didn't seem the same. Gene's official word: "Oh, the economy has something to do with the decision. More than that, I'm almost 65, and it's time to take it a little bit easier."

Gene identified the new owners as Doug and Diane Lee, who have the Music Unlimited outlets — one each in San Leandro and Dublin (Contra Costa County). He declined to discuss financial details.

"I'm not sure if they'll retain our family name," Gene said, "or if they'll keep the traditional sales staff of musicians. For my part, call it 'semi-retirement.' I'll continue to run Abinante Piano Rental from another location."

On the same day Gene spoke of the sale, master instrument repairman John Imislund told this writer he will retire as of Jan. 1. John's shop has been at Abinante Music since 1962.

"I've fixed enough old horns," the 77-year-old John said. "But I'll keep playing (reeds, piano, organ)."

Leo, Gene, Bob, John. We're lucky to have had such people on call for so long.

Modifying an impression

Program Director Reg Huston of Youth Music Monterey seeks to modify the impression made by a report printed in another weekly journal. Youth Music announced "it is canceling its popular Summer Music Monterey classical and jazz camps for kids," the article said.

"I would use the word 'suspending' the camps," Reg said without rancor. "We've been forced to call off the 1994 sessions (at Robert Louis Stevenson School), but we have every intention of bringing them back in 1995."

The bind: Youth Music lost its lease to hold weekly bingo games at a parlor in Salinas. Organized by the late Ruth Fenton, these games meant major income — many hundreds of thousands of dollars — over the past 11 years. Springtime will see new games starting at another site.

The lost revenue led Youth Music board members to call off next year's camps. But, as Reg said, the valuable situations definitely are not dead in the water.

Major assignment

Writer Bob Greenfield from Carmel Valley will help script a full-blown documentary film about the late Bill Graham. His collaborator will be Bill Couturie, Oscar-winning producer of documentaries.

Greenfield's involvement makes great good sense. He co-wrote with Bill a book about Graham's busy path. Bill Graham Presents: My Life Inside Rock and Out was issued by Doubleday. Bill died in a 1991 Sonoma County helicopter crash.

GENE ABINANTE of Abinante Music looked like this in the middle '50s. He handed over the photo after revealing that the 64-year-old shop has been sold.

Couturie says he will direct. Tentative title — Stages: The Life of Bill Graham. "It'll be a history of pop culture as seen through his eyes. And it'll cover every element in his life, from the Catskills to Live Aid."

Couturie told industry reporters: "Music from artists with whom Graham worked will play an integral role." (Known primarily as a promoter of rock, Graham deserves appreciation for his bringing along of blues bands which caught his ear. And he was never shy about booking jazz artists where they fit.)

Initial financing will come from Bill Graham Presents in San Francisco. Executives there say studios have responded well to the idea, and BGP expects to close a distribution deal very shortly.

Couturie won an Oscar for his documentary on the AIDS quilt. His Emmy came via Dear America: Letters From Vietnam.

The Greenfield title won a prize at this year's Ralph J. Gleason Music Book Awards. This fourth annual ceremony was held at New York's University Club under sponsorship of New York University, Rolling Stone magazine and the BMI music licensing agency.

The late Ralph, of course, helped Jimmy Lyons shape the vision for Monterey Jazz Festival. He was the first jazz critic to pick up on the social significance of the San Francisco rock scene.

Short takes

- Changes at Villa Pompeii in Carmel Rancho Center. The John Cortes Quintet will take off the rest of this month, resuming duty in January. The Tuesday evening jam sessions — hosted by bassist Norm Ross — draw many positive comments. Last week, pianists and vocalists turned out.

- Kuumbwa Jazz Center of Santa Cruz has gone dark for the holidays. Up next: Joe Pass Quartet (Jan. 10), Terra Sul (Jan. 14), Benny Green Trio (Jan. 17), Pharaoh Sanders Quartet (Jan. 24), Gene Harris Quartet (Jan. 31).

- Starting in January, Monterey Jazz Festival will sponsor a weekly hour of my Sunset Jazz show over KRML Radio. Spokespersons will chat about MJF's place in the community and coming events. More on this later.

- Bruce Labadie, producer of the annual San Jose Jazz Festival, has been hired to put together the 1994 San Jose America Festival. This annual event showcases international music and dance groups; it's held over the Independence Day Weekend.

Soloists dazzle in Camerata Singers' Christmas performance

By NATHALIE PLOTKIN

IN THEIR traditional program of "Christmas Music at the Missions," Dr. Vahe Aslanian and the Camerata Singers were heard Dec. 11 in the Carmel Mission Basilica.

As in years past, Aslanian created a program with an intriguing selection of music. This time, except for Bach's "Magnificat," the program offered a chance to hear little known works from the late Renaissance and the early Baroque. While all was not perfect, the spirit never failed.

Three versions of motet

In a fascinating offering of musical settings of the motet text "O Magnum Mysterium," which exists in almost innumerable versions, the audience heard those of three composers born within 7 years of each other in the middle 1500s, but working in widely varying milieus.

First was the Bohemian composer Jacob Handl's antiphonal eight-part construction with the Camerata singers facing each other from opposite ends of the hall. It was a simple, yet reverent and warm performance with fine echo effects and carefully molded dynamics.

William Byrd's quietly voiced and pure toned composition was more refined in style. The phrases were very well executed and the voices were responsive. It was cool and subtle singing.

The chorus brought a hushed and somewhat more religious quality to the music of the Spanish composer de Victoria. A charming Hallelujah grew in grandeur as it was sung with rich tone. All three motets were highly effective and professional a cappella performances.

Moving on to the middle Baroque period and the "Cantata Pastorale per la nativita di nostro Signore Gesu Cristo" by Alessandro Scarlatti, soprano Pamela Sebastian and the orchestra strings gave a fine reading of this charming work.

After a lively orchestral introduction, Sebastian sang the three recitatives and arias with shining delivery and bright vocalism. Though the violins were initially rather rough, they warmed up so that by the final aria, everyone was in good form to match the polished performance of Sebastian.

Katherine McKee, mezzo soprano (a real find with a lovely alto quality to her voice), was joined by tenor Andrew Morgan and bass Paul Cosentino in Purcell's "Christmas Anthem" sung in English.

Opulent, velvety vocalism

A truly pre-Handelian work with brief solos and choral interjections, it acquainted the listener with McKee's opulent, velvety vocalism.

The major work on the program was that glowing example of the High Baroque, Bach's "Magnificat." In 12 brief movements, plus four interpolations for Christmas Vespers, it is one of Bach's most compact compositions and also one of his most irresistibly optimistic ones.

The first section "Magnificat" is an exultant piece for chorus and full orchestra complete with piccolo trumpet. Everyone galloped off, not always together, but with fine spirit and ringing resonance. This is a major work with much demanding and difficult music. All the forces entailed put out a great effort, but lack of sufficient rehearsal time together was evident.

McKee was a luxuriant soloist in her two brief arias. Sebastian sang her aria with tenderness and sweet tone.

Tenor Andrew Morgan and bass Paul Cosentino were sturdy performers who were faced with highly demanding tessituras and managed to hold their own.

Poetry Corner

Featuring Christmas verse by young bard Aric Clark

THIS POEM by Aric Clark, now 12, was written when Aric was a sixth grader attending Los Arboles Middle School in Marina. Aric first showed an interest in poetry at the age of eight, when he prepared to audition for the part of Prince Arthur in the play King John.

ARIC FULTON CLARK

Aric became fascinated with Shakespeare and seemed to have a natural affinity for the old English words. Later, he experimented with free verse, sonnets and even haiku. Aric hopes to enter the University of California at Berkeley and become a journalist. He has started his first novel and has completed 16 chapters.

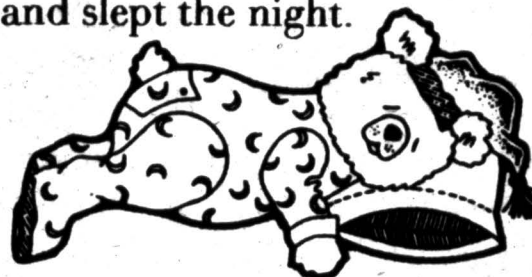

This summer, Aric participated in the GroveMont Theater productions of Henry VI, Edward VIII and Richard III, in all of which he was required to die. Aric has one sister, Clariet, age 11.

And the Angels Sang

I woke up late on Christmas night
And sneaked out to the couch
On the tree were lights, blue and white
And angels sang, I vouch.

Silver drops hung shimmering in the light, shone unusually bright.
On the window was spray of snow, with mistletoe above the door — and
'Neath our Christmas tree were packages galore.

The moonlit sky and there sat I with awe,
My mind was standing still with such delight.
I took my bear, crawled 'neath the tree,
Fell asleep . . . and slept the night.

Kamada's work displayed at Three Spirits

when you try to set them down."

Kamada is now concentrating on still lifes and a series of paintings of fish in ponds. Some of her work can be seen at Three Spirits Gallery in Pacific Grove, where she recently had a 10-year retrospective show.

The artist received a Master of Arts degree in painting from Marshall University in West Virginia and has exhibited her work widely on the peninsula since moving here eight years ago.

Kamada's favorite paintings are the still lifes of flowers by the 17th century Dutch masters. "The expressiveness of the line, the jewel-like colors, the glow of the reflected light — this is what painting is about."

"How lucky we are that 300 years ago a group of painters cared enough about their world and their craft to develop an understanding of what would endure."
